Indique brevemente las metodologías utilizadas
Classes will include work on research skills, through the reading and analysis of theoretical material and the introduction of research-oriented questions and methodologies. Strong emphasis will be put on the practice of reflective reading, the understanding of theoretical concepts, and the practical analysis of authentic discourse. Guide questions will be provided for each assigned reading to help students with the reflection and reading processes. Examples of the potential of discourse analysis for EFL teaching will be provided and studied in detail.
EVALUACIÓN
Evaluación: Part 1. Students will keep a reading diary in which they will summarize the contents of the assigned readings and reflect their reactions to each of them. On completion of the course, students will be required to write a short analytical paper related to one of the aspects covered in class. All tasks will be uploaded to Studium. Part 2. Students will present short oral presentations and hold round tables on the assigned readings; these sessions will be followed by a general discussion of the main points of the readings. They will be required to design a complete CLIL unit and an outline of a research plan that demonstrates how second language theory and discourse analysis may be applied in the classroom
